

No Tomorrow Without Him in Your Life Today

Dan Evans, 1999

Verse 1 She sat beyond the door and waited in a daze.
Doctors who had hurried in, now strolled slowly out again.
She looked for reason in their eyes to hope amid her fears,
For life as she has known it with her husband of six years.

The radio newscaster described as he drove to his next stop,
A fatal accident on the street, in just another block.
Why now, he asked and reached for his phone to warn he would be late,
Passing the twisted metal, he saw his daughter's license plate.

Refrain. When will it end? When will it come?
Where will you be when your time is done?
Do you have another moment, another day or two,
Is another risk worth taking, will chance be good to you?

Life here is short and fleeting, you never know when yours will end,
If you haven't met your Savior, don't put it off my friend.
One thing I know is certain, it's all I know to say,
There is no tomorrow, without Him in your life today.

Verse 2 Lettering in every sport meant everything to him.
From fall through spring he never missed another chance to win.
One Thursday on the football field, he ran a pass to goal.
A hidden defect in his heart, the teen was dead before he reached the pole.

Vacation started at the lake with the normal lecture said,
Don't swim unless your mom is here, don't go in over your head.
That afternoon the sheriff spoke, it could be days before we find,
The body of your little boy, all we can do is try.

Verse 3 He lived a quiet life of stoic pride and dignity,
Perhaps in youth he was more fun, robust and carefree.
All that's left are memories, the lessons he taught of life,
And the love for your dear grandpa, who went home just last night.

You and your friends made fun of her, when she taught your third grade class,
At Sunday School in the little church, but those impressions didn't last.
So when your daughter turned nine years, you took her by one day,
To a rest home where your teacher, still had these words to say...

Refrain When will it end? When will it come?
Where will you be when your time is done?
You may only have a moment, another day or two,
No risk is worth taking, that keeps God away from you?

My life went by so fast and many I loved are gone,
You and I need to talk about it, before I too go home.
One thing I know is certain, it's all I know to say,
There is no tomorrow, without Him in your life today.
